To make characters seem real, you need to tap into what drives them. Use this foolproof method to bring the emotion of your story to life and craft compelling characters. The source and exact nature of the curious phenomena we refer to as characters remains something of a mystery, but the craft of characterization is not.

How to Craft Compelling Characters - Writer's Digest
Fiction emotions attached to the narrative, such as absorption in the story, or pity or joy for a character, are for Jerslev empathetic, and fiction emotions attached to the mise-en-scène, such as enjoyment of landscape, are non-empathetic; making of the fictional world is marked by mostly non-empathetic artefact emotions, such as admiration of technical skills (Jerslev 214-215).
