Heartless Georgian 1 Mary Balogh

Mary Balogh writes excellent and actually meaty romances. She's also not afraid to leave the standard Regency setting. This one is a Georgian one. Complete with a man wearing makeup and being more concerned with his clothes than most of the women in the story. I thought that would make him a little less masculine, but he pulls it off with charm.

As an adult, Balogh discovered the world of the Regency romance as written by Georgette Heyer. The vast majority of Balogh's novels have been set in Regency or Georgian England or Wales. Although she writes historical romances, Mary Balogh's heroines are often not "ladies". Some are courtesans, illegitimate, "fallen" or "ruined" women.

Mary Balogh - Wikipedia

Balogh leads the genre with her thorough historical research. I tire of opening romance books set in 1810-1830. It seems writers are afraid to depart from Regency--maybe they fear doing real research when it's easier to mimic what the other authors are writing? Balogh breaks the mold with a Georgian book.

Mary Balogh is my favourite authoress = the Simply series is wonderful as is her latest Survivors club and also One Night of Love and the follow up of a Summer to Remember, both an absolute delight. But oh dear I have got half way through Heartless and just given up - the characters and story are completely 'heartless'.
